Introduction

Carl Hugo Linsingen Hahn, also widely known under his nickname Cocky, and his Ovambo nickname Shongola ("The Whip"), was the son of the Rev. Carl Hugo Hahn (1846-1933) and his wife Anna Judith Julie Auguste Hahn (née von Linsingen, 1861-1938), and grandson of the Hereroland missionary Carl Hugo Hahn (1818-1895). He was born at Paarl on 4 January 1886. He attended school until Standard Six in Paarl whereafter he worked for seven and a half years in banking and two and half years in the mining industry.¹⁾ He joined the Imperial Light Horse in 1914, served with this regiment through the 1914 rebellion, proceeded with the Corps to the then German South West Africa and served in the field until after the occupation of Windhoek, when according to instructions he was transferred for duty with the Native Administrative Branch and special military work as required by the Military Governor. These duties were generally under the supervision of Lieut. Col. Pritchard or Major C.N. Manning.²⁾

Hahn accompanied Col. Pritchard on the first expedition to Ovamboland in 1915. When Pritchard returned, Hahn remained in Ovamboland attached to the staff of the first Resident Commissioner, Major Liefeldt. The latter was succeeded by Major Manning, whom Hahn also joined.³⁾

Hahn then joined the Ovamboland Expedition against King Mandume, where he was on Manning's staff as well as performing special duties as e.g. O.C. Scouts and Intelligence of the Expeditionary Force, O.C. patrol to Okavango River area and acting British Representative in Namakunde.⁴⁾ When Major Manning retired from Ovamboland, Hahn succeeded him in 1917 and remained in Ovamboland as Native Commissioner until 1947.⁵⁾

Hahn was an outstanding administrator and a leading proponent of the policies of "indirect rule" over colonial peoples. His knowledge of the Ovambo people and their country was highly regarded by the South African Government. In 1937 he was sent to Geneva to attend the League of Nations' session and represented South Africa at a meeting of the Mandates Commission. In 1946 he accompanied General Smuts to the United Nations Conference as adviser on the treatment of "Natives" in South West Africa, and again in 1947, in the same capacity, he accompanied the then Minister of Justice.⁶⁾

At the beginning of January 1947 Hahn retired from the civil service in Ovamboland and was appointed a member of the Native Labour Commission. In March 1947 when his health was beginning to fail he retired to his farm Akerbou in the Grootfontein district, but was retained by the Administration as a consultant on "Native Affairs".⁷⁾

Hahn died in the Grootfontein Hospital on 27 September 1948⁸⁾ and was buried at Grootfontein cemetery.⁹⁾

In 1927 Hahn was asked to contribute a chapter on the Owambo for the book: The Native Tribes of South West Africa.¹⁰⁾ For this he undertook extensive research.¹¹⁾ Hahn was a keen photographer and his hundreds of photographs of northern Namibia bear testimony of this.¹²⁾

For his distinguished services in the G.S.W.A. campaign Hahn was awarded the 1914/15 Star¹³⁾ and the M.B.E.¹⁴⁾ as well as the King's Silver Jubilee Medal in 1935.¹⁵⁾

Carl Hugo Linsingen Hahn, was married to Alice Fogarty, second daughter of the Bishop of Damaraland and they had one son, Rodney.¹⁶⁾

The documents and their arrangement

The documents were obtained from Hahn's son, Rodney, during July 1985 and transported from Sedgfield to the Windhoek Archives. According to the agreement reached, the documents will stay the property of Mr. R. Hahn.

All items, except diaries, note books, maps and photo graphs have been arranged according to their contents and documents of related subjects have been grouped together, e.g. all documents concerning Ovamboland were brought together and then again subdivided into smaller subjects, which have been arranged chronologically.

Diaries and note books have been arranged chronologically, since more than one subject appears in them. Maps, photographs and negatives have also been arranged separately.

The documents are to some extent in a damaged state, especially the photographs. The negatives are so badly damaged that they can no longer be reproduced.

The collection consists of 25 storage units of documents, five storage units of photographs and negatives and 77 maps.

Although gaps exist, the collection nevertheless sufficiently reflects Hahn's activities in Ovamboland and contains extensive information on the people and country of northern South West Africa. Further files with material on CHL Hahn in the National Archives include LAN [708] 2115/02, EST [1111] 255/1948, NAO [1] 1/2, NAO [51] 1/12, SWAA [1899] A406/A/547, and Private Accession A.335.

Postscript (2017)

The photographs were reviewed in August 2005 and transferred into protective covers to prevent further deterioration. They are stored in Boxes P.1-6 which are shelved with the "Photo Originals" Collection (PO/A.450). At an unknown stage between 1985 and 2000, a number of the negatives had been printed and taken into the Archives photo collection (photo collection numbers 11749-11947). Those photos are indexed in the PHOTO database, and are retrievable with the search term "@PHOT=HAHN, C.H.L." Access to the original photos and negatives is restricted.

After the death of Mr Rodney Hahn, the copyright for C.H.L. Hahn's photos is administered by his daughter Jo-Ann Visser, joannvisser@gmail.com.

Related: A.0929 consists of copies Hahn photographs that had been handed over by Rodney Hahn to Ernst Rudolf Scherz, and are now with the Scherz estate at Basler Afrika Bibliographien.
